—MARRIED—May 26th. by Rev. Father Meagher, Miss Bergholme to Miss Jennie Burgoyne.

—The dog poisoner got in his work this morning, the victim being Major Dennis' pointer, Archie.—Tuscarora Times Review.

It is quite certain that poor Archie occupies a higher plane or sphere in the spiritual world than will ever be reached by the black hearted wretch who administered the fatal drug. It is also as certain that his death is more sincerely mourned and lamented, and by a better class of people, than will be the exit into the jaws of Shael of the hell begotten rival of Dr. Jekyll's double, whose jealousy of the superior attributes of the dumb animal, prompted the fiendish act. The Times Review is authorized, in behalf of the writer, to offer a reward of twenty five dollars for such information as will identify the perpetrator of the cowardly deed.

Silver Glance.

Willard and McDonald came in last Wednesday with their usual wad of gold. The last was the best run they have made. Mr. Willard claims that a 48 hour run of his two-stamp mill yielded $4,800, which are at the rate of one hundred dollars per hour. This was the product of four tons of ore. Another vein has been struck which is the richest yet found. It was struck at a depth of 180 feet. It has been worked fifteen feet, and there is large amounts of ore in sight. Mr. McDonald left a few days ago for Canada. As soon as he returns a tunnel will be started at the foot of the mountain to tap the newly discovered ore body. In the mean time the vein will be worked from the shaft or incline. The gentlemen deserve great credit for their enterprise in developing their mine, which has cost them a large amount of money and labor. Many of our Carson business men are interested in mines in this district, and this new strike will encourage them to renewed efforts to develop the mineral resources of that portion of the State. Work will soon be resumed in several of the mines which have remained idle for more than a year. The mines near Wellington are looking well and the outlook is favorable for lively times at Silver Glance this summer. The rich gold specimen mentioned by the Enterprise was not found near Carson but came from Willard & McDonald's claim.

The “Cryptogram.”
The closest and most careful personal and consideration of Ignatius Donnelly's “Cryptogram,” should fail to shake the belief of any intelligent person, that Shakespeare has for nearly three centuries, wrongfully borne the posthumous title of “Immortal Bard.” Donnelly's Baconian argument is flimsy, puerile, and pointless. His pretended cipher is nothing more or less than a labored combination of syllables and words from the Shakespearean plays, strung into sentences to suit the purpose of the author. There is no uniformity in their location, and the same or similar sentences could be easily constructed in the same manner from the works of Byron, Pope, Bryant, or any other poet. The “Cryptogram” is an absurdity and its author either a crank or fraud.

A Mean Boy.
About a week ago John Sweeney notified all persons through these columns not to shoot on his ranch. A few days after this notice was given Mr. Sweeney saw a boy in the pasture and went to him and told him to go away, whereupon the boy told him he would not go away and that he would shoot all he pleased. Yesterday the boy returned and while in the pasture shot and killed one of Mr. Hubbard's fine thoroughbred mares that was with foal. The mare was shot in the left flank. Sheriff Ulrick went out and arrested the boy who was afterwards let go for the want of proofs. As soon as proofs are obtained the boy will be arrested and prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

THEN WHY SO ANXIOUS.

Mr. Phelps, he of England and America, said at a recent banquet that Englishmen had discovered some time ago that Free Trade with America would not be very beneficial for them but would rather have a tendency to hurt them. He insisted also that Americans need not fear the freedom of open markets for competition and the superior opportunities they had for obtaining raw materials would always give them an advantage over foreign competition. This is very strange talk for Mr. Phelps who is an avowed Free Trader, and very strange talk to come from a man who is so well acquainted with English sentiment on this subject. If England does not want Free Trade and is satisfied that no advantage would come from it, then will Mr. Phelps tell why every representative paper in London raised the Hallelujah chorus over Mr. Cleveland's Free Trade message? Why is it then that the Cobden Club, representing the English manufacturers, is so industriously engaged in circulating Free Trade literature in this country and endeavoring in every way it can to influence elections in favor of the Democratic party? If these Englishmen expect to reap no special advantage from Free Trade then why are they so dreadfully anxious about it? It is evident that Mr. Phelps is not making one of his usual London speeches. But he cannot hoodwink the American people by any such theory as he suggested. England wants Free Trade with the United States so it can get possession of the American markets. If it were to change places with the United States it would in all probability be, as Mr. Labouchere frankly suggested, for protection.—Exchange.

Mint Improvement.

The mining companies of the Comstock are beginning to realize the advantage of having their bullion reduced at the Carson Mint. The institution is now turning out monthly, in fine bars, silver to the amount of 150,000 standard ounces, and about 10,000 ounces of gold. The gold bugs in the East, and other enemies of silver, can no longer manufacture capital by the cry that the Comstock bullion is transported past the doors of the Mint, for reduction at private smelting works in San Francisco, for the institution is now running to its fullest capacity. So great has been the increase of deposits that it has been necessary to erect nitric acid works, which will increase the refining capacity about 60,000 ounces per month. For the last four years only the sulphuric acid process has been worked. In addition to the capacity increase, the new works will materially facilitate the refining of low grade bullion, which is extremely difficult by the sulphuric process. The new works will be ready for operation in a couple of days.
